A device that can scan the child accurately to tell his mother what pain he feels and the reason for his crying.

It is an important invention to get rid of children's crying and noise and also not to lose time to go to the doctor and give him medicines that may be incorrect, which leads to harming the child and also financial costs. One of the things that makes this invention important is that it provides comfort to the parents and provides comfort for the child also and reduces the discomfort of the child also and this invention Important and I think it should be there soon

The difficulties I encounter in this invention are the lack of sufficient capabilities in artificial intelligence
